Caring for Lakewood Families in Need

Moishy was bored, so he decided to go for a walk through town. With his green paintbrush he painted a long path and set out on it.

On his way, he met a little boy crying on the sidewalk. Moishy stopped and asked him what was the matter.

When Moishy heard that the little boy had scraped his knee, he quickly painted a bright green Band-Aid for him and the little boy felt all better.

Moishy continued along.

He started feeling thirsty, so he stopped into the little green grocery right in front of him and bought a drink. While he was paying, he spotted a tzedakah pushka standing on the counter.

Moishy rummaged through his pockets but only found a few pennies. He quickly made a gigantic green dollar bill and squeezed it into the pushka.

Outside, Moishy found a man huffing and puffing as he pushed a double carriage up the block.

Moishy ran back to the grocery, paid for another two drinks, and handed them to the thankful man.

Moishy saw a park in the distance.
He loved parks!
He jumped all the way there and rushed towards the swings...

But all the swings were taken.

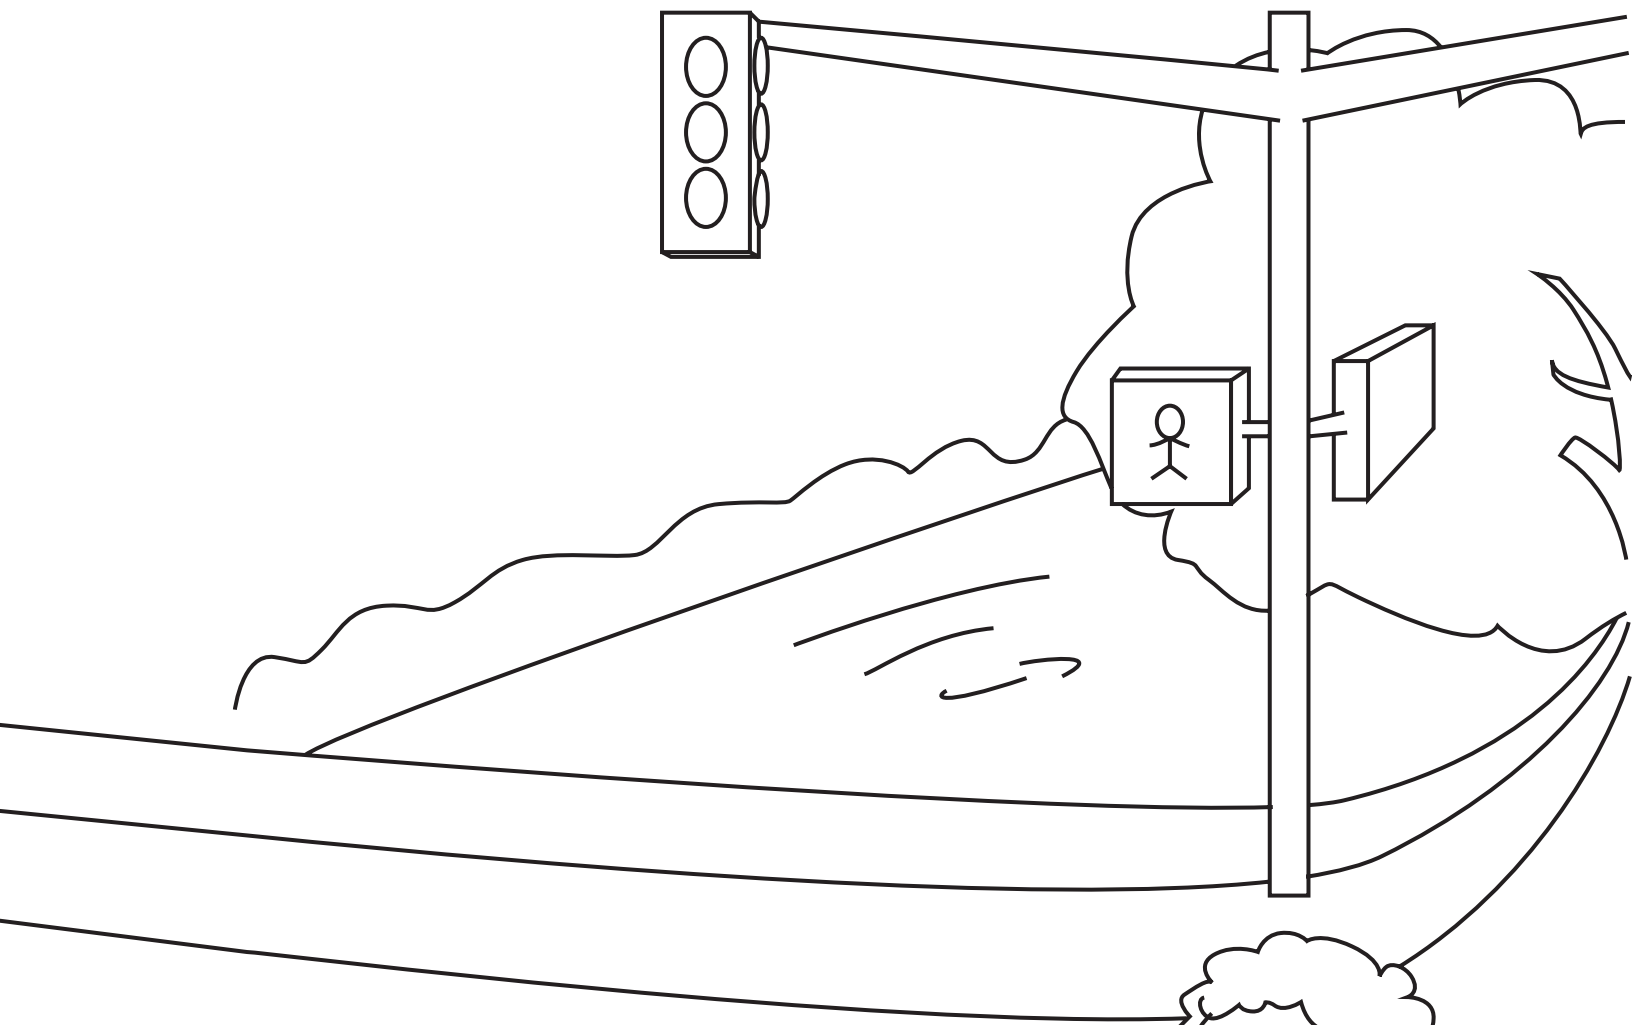

He noticed a little girl bite her lip and turn to leave.
Moishy quickly painted a beautiful, bright green swing and watched as the little girl's face lit up.

It was beginning to get dark, so Moishy began his trek home.

At the corner he noticed an old lady holding a bunch of heavy shopping bags, but the crossing light was taking forever to turn green. With his green paintbrush, Moishy painted it green and stopped the cars.

He took some bags from the old lady and they walked together across the street.

Moishy was almost home. He noticed a hungry boy sitting on a bench.

Moishy's stomach was rumbling too, but he offered the boy a big, bright green snack bag.

Right by his driveway, Moishy bumped into a man in a tattered jacket walking past his house.

Moishy drew a bunch of beautiful, green bills and offered them to the man, telling him to buy himself a brand new suit for Yom Tov.

Moishy pushed open his front door and saw his baby brother whimpering sadly on the floor. A freshly painted green lollipop soon calmed him down.

Moishy was glowing. He was painting the town
Green with goodness.

Once in bed, he thought about how wonderful it was to be able to give, making himself and the people he helped smile, while making his town a better place for all.
